He loved music, especially playing his bass guitar, and was not shy about sharing his opinion of both. Pat's life was forever altered by a traumatic brain injury in 2000. Although he lost many things as a result of the injury, he never lost his love for life, or his ability to laugh. He will be forever missed. “ Patrick and I shared a deep friendship and trust through my years assisting him with his brain injury. We shared many a laughter and tears. We danced, played computer, sang and read together, and shared great stories of our experiences. Patrick will forever be loved for his boundless spirit and enthusiasm: thoughtful, expressive, apologetic, and fun-loving. It was a delight to be with him. My condolences to his family for such a huge and untimely loss.
