“ My Brother Paul, I always remember when you were little you loved to play with farm animal toys. It didn't surprise me that you became a vet. I remember meeting your Professor and her telling me you were a good student. I was glad to meet all your friends on your birthday. You will be really missed by all. Love sister Suzie and family.

“ *To Tanner, Nevada and Sheryl;
Too many sets of horse and cattle papers to count that Paul did for us going to the US and never a problem. Always enjoyed visits with Paul and he will be missed. He was a great vet and a great guy. Our thoughts are with you.*

“ I did not share any memories at the funeral today, given so much that was shared by fellow vets. I do want to share , so here goes.

I met Paul through the friendship he had with my father, Morris Hanson, who was a horse vet. Paul was 8 years older than me. He was a hard working groom for the Simpson family jumping horses, he had not finished high school but was very smart and was interested in the veterinary work my Dad did at Simpson's ranch north of Cochrane. I would go there on calls with my Dad or to shoot gophers with my friends in the summer.

I was in high school at the time. With all the distraction I so easily succumbed to, Paul impressed me with his drive and tenacity, going back to finish high school and then taking pre-vet courses in an Agriculture program in university. I was a couple of years behind him in university and I was also trying to get into the vet school in Saskatoon. He kept applying and doing another year in university and then got into vet school. I never did and ended up a lawyer. When my Dad retired in 1973, he bought a farm southwest of High River and Paul came to help drive the old machinery and put in the crops in May of that year.

My family had not yet moved from Calgary and there were four of us, sleeping in sleeping bags on foams on the floor and cultivating and seeding all day. We ate alot of cheese sandwiches and macaroni and cheese and it was then that I really got to know Paul and appreciate his with and sense of humour. With our hair the way it was, having him along with us, when we went to the bar to play pool in High River, is what saved us from being beaten up during such excursions.

About this time is when the horror movie "The Exhorsist" came out and we all watched it together. It scared the poop out of all of us, including Paul. Because of his argumentative style, I began calling him "Devil Roar" to remind him of the movie and get a rise out of him, but he did the same to me. I know of know of no-one else in the world who has ever had this nickname but it was our special thing, every time we saw each other, for more than 40 years, until he died.

Paul got into the vet school and I was jealous. I transferred out to UBC and took marine biology. Then I went to law school. Listening to all of Paul's veterinarian friends and his daughter Nevada at his funeral today, I am reminded of how gifted Paul was with horses. It really would have been nice to have gotten into vet school and had him as a mentor.

Paul never tired of telling me what scum lawyers were and all the wrongs with our justice system. This did not interfere with my being his lawyer for more than 30 years.

One time, after his heart attack in the early 1980s, after he and Sherrill had bought the farm from my parents, we were building a chicken coop there, while having a heated argument about the evils of the justice system. His heart was still weak and he would start to pass out when bending over to hammer staples to attach the chicken wire.

He would not let that stop him - and he would turn blue in the face making his point about the justice system, to the point that I just let him win the argument, for fear he would give himself another heart attack.

I am proud that, all these years, when Paul had a problem, he would consult me, regardless of how deficient he may have suggested that my profession and I was. I knew how to take his jabs.

We remained friends all these years, through all the changes in our lives.

Goodbye Devil Roar,

I will miss you.

“ Paul was one of those rare individuals who you always felt better with after having a visit. His laughter, his stories and his wit will be missed. Paul wore a few different hats over his career, however he was excellent at them all and relished the challenge. I will miss Paul. Condolences to the family.

“ I met Paul at WCVM and worked briefly in practice with him in Okotoks. Over the years we had many short encounters that provided and opportunity to catch up with each others lives. He appeared to have endless energy and commitment to getting a job done. Very saddened to hear of Paul's passing and wish to express my sincere condolences to his family.

“ As a veterinarian working for the CFIA Paul never forgot what it was like to be in practice and would always go the extra distance to help out. Shortly after the border reopened to live cattle following BSE we had a mix up in some export cattle sent to the US that arrived at the plant with one too many animals for the paper work. What looked to be a very messy situation was quickly resolved by Paul going the extra distance to get a birth certificate for the extra animal, making up an export certificate and sending it to the plant. It wasn't his problem but he was always willing to help out. Our sincere sympathy to his family.
